Not illustrated. 1836 Excerpt: . take sufficient interest in the direction of literary works; and at the same time, that a man of letters would not be more out of place at the head of a society, composed in part of persons whose language he did not understand. He was then right in dividing the office in order that it might be completely filled. We must not be expected to follow Lagrange step by step, in the learned researches with which he has filled the Memoirs of Berlin, after his arrival in that city, on the 6th November, 1766, and even some volumes of the Academy of Turin, that owed to him, in all respects, its existence. But we cannot omit pointing out, at least in a few words, the most remarkable which they contain. He wrote the following Memoirs in the Transactions of the Berlin Academy: --1. A great memoir wherein are found the demonstration of a curious proposition that Euler could not demonstrate, a new extension given to this theorem and direct proofs of many other propositions, to which Euler had arrived only by way of induction, and in which, after having enriched the analysis of Diophautus and Fermat, the author passes to the theory of equations, with partial differences explains a striking paradox noticed by Euler, makes known an entire class of equations of which there were only some isolated examples, and puts out of sight the paradox by showing to what belong, both the complete integral...
