Reviews

The book is great and fantastic. It is written in straightforward words and phrases rather than difficult to understand. You won't really feel monotony at any time of your respective time (that's what catalogues are for regarding should you question me).

Excerpt: . supplies from the river Webbe which flows behind the hills, nearly parallel to the sea shore and at no great distance from it. This bare and steep shore continues to the Govind or river of Jubah, a few miles S. of the equator. Then follows, 4thly, a line of coast somewhat resembling the preceding, but of more recent, or less advanced, formation. The hills or downs are less elevated and nearer to the sea, while a reef of coral with a chain of small islands, lies at a distance of two or three miles from the land, bounding a narrow channel, so shallow and beset with rocks, as to be in some places, hardly navigable even for boats. This coral chain extends about 150 miles, but with an interruption for some distance in the middle, where the growth of the coral has been checked by the fresh water of two or three streams from the mainland. Kuyu bay, where the coral reef terminates, is the first of several inlets imperfectly known, which appear to communicate with a large river in the back ground and in front of which lie the Islands of Pata, Lamu, Manda, c. Here begins, 5thly, a new region with a new race of men: the fertility and populousness of Zingiber, here rise into view. A little farther S. towards Mombasa the coast becomes more elevated and varied in feature, and is at the same time covered with superb trees,...
